Health Communication Certificate

Careers in Health and in Communication are growing much faster than average according to the Office of Occupational Outlook, Bureau of Labor Statistics. Health communication skills are increasingly valuable in careers related to health and medicine, as well as the media, public relations, and strategic communication. In terms of health and medicine, this includes medical and health practitioners, patient advocates, personal trainers, non-profit workers, healthy lifestyle activists and coaches, public health spokespersons, nurses, doctors, therapists, public affairs policy makers, and community health workers. In terms of media, public relations and strategic communication, this includes public health campaign designers and evaluators, health advertising specialists, health website designers, and public relations professionals for hospitals, health organizations, and agencies. Health communication skills are applicable for a variety of health and medical career tasks including provider-patient consultations; the formative research, design, implementation, and assessment of public health communication campaigns; the development of strategic communication initiatives for health organizations and related products and services; as well as leadership in public and private sector health agendas. Health messaging reaches diverse audiences and includes the use of advocacy to influence policy, as well as mediating and shaping public conversations on health issues both face-to-face and via traditional and new media in local and global arenas. Health communication skills are important for nonprofit, nonprofit, and governmental organizations. This Health Communication Certificate (HCC) contains two tracks to prepare students to contribute in these arenas. One track provides a path of study for students interested in communication in healthcare organizations and provider-patient relationships. The other track provides a path of study for students interested in health campaigns, other forms of mediated health communication, and health policy. The HCC requires a minimum of 18 credit hours in designated coursework plus a significant service-learning component. Students must earn a grade of “B” or better in each course used to meet the requirements. Students who pursue the HCC must complete all requirements prior to graduation. Specific certificate requirements are available in the Undergraduate Studies Office of the Department of Communication. Details are also available at http://communication.tamu.edu

*Prof. Street contributed to the development of this proposal and indicated her willingness to serve on the Health Communication Certificate Coordinating Committee. The committee will also include Dr. R. Street, Dr. Hong, and Dr. Beaudoin from the Department of Communication, and faculty from other Departments, as needed and appropriate.

D. Students — Describe general recruitment efforts and admission requirements. In accordance with the institution’s Uniform Recruitment and Retention Strategy, describe plans to recruit, retain, and graduate students from underrepresented groups for the program.

Evidence of demand for this program is evident through student inquiries to the department from both current students and prospective students. We anticipate demand for this certificate from our own majors, from students who plan careers as practitioners including health educators, clinicians, nonprofit workers and the like. The Department of Communication currently has over 1000 undergraduate majors. An application process for the certificate and a minimum of a grade of B in each class required in the minor are in place to assure high quality performance.

E. Library — Provide the library director’s assessment of library resources necessary for the program. Describe plans to build the library holdings to support the program.

Current library holdings are sufficient for this certificate.

Updated 06.07.2010
F. Facilities and Equipment – Describe the availability and adequacy of facilities and equipment to support the program. Describe plans for facility and equipment improvements/additions.
No new facilities or equipment will be required.

G. Accreditation – If the discipline has a national accrediting body, describe plans to obtain accreditation or provide a rationale for not pursuing accreditation.
Not applicable.

H. Evaluation – Describe the evaluation process that will be used to assess the quality and effectiveness of the new degree program.
We propose to engage members of our Alumni Advisory Board who are engaged in the practice of Health Communication, peer faculty members from other institutions for a regular five-year written review, beginning in 2019. Reviewers will consider criteria derived from the COMM Department’s last accreditation review, from criteria solicited from faculty supporting the certificate, from the reviewers themselves and derived from the Student Learning Outcomes from the courses. Reviewers will also make recommendations for improving the curriculum. We are fortunate to have pools of resources available through our respective research networks in ICA (International Communication Association), NCA (National Communication Association) and AACH (American Academy on Communication and Healthcare.)

III. Costs and Funding

1. Report costs for new faculty hires, graduate assistants, and technical support personnel. For new faculty, prorate individual salaries as a percentage of the time assigned to the program. If existing faculty will contribute to program, include costs necessary to maintain existing programs (e.g., cost of adjunct to cover courses previously taught by faculty who would teach in new program).
2. Specify other costs (e.g., administrative costs, travel).
3. Indicate formula funding for students new to the institution because of the program; formula funding should be included only for years three through five of the program and should reflect enrollment projections for years three through five.
4. Report other sources of funding here. In-hand grants, “likely” future grants, and designated tuition and fees can be included.
