SUBJECT: Proposed Certificate in Leadership Study and Development

The School of Military Science proposes to offer a certificate in "Leadership Study and Development." The attached document details the 12 hours of credit required to earn the certificate. The goal of this certificate program is to provide students in the Corps of Cadets from all degree programs with a more complete knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals and practices of leadership in a complex society.

This certificate program is a component of the School's commitment to expand the intentional development of leadership capabilities of students. Completing the requirements will better prepare the students for future leadership roles in all sectors of society. Our faculty has discussed the certificate program with current and former students, potential employers of A&M graduates, as well as with A&M administrators and faculty. There is a consensus that the certificate program will satisfy an interest of our students and responds to an important expressed need in our society.

Once approved, the School of Military Science will assume the responsibility for administering this certificate program. We will provide the appropriate information for students satisfying the certificate requirements to the Registrar's Office so that the certificate may be listed on their transcripts.

Please direct any questions to me at either 845-2811 or jvanalstyne@corps.tamu.edu.

Certificate in Leadership Study and Development
Proposed by the School of Military Science
February 24, 2004

The Certificate In Leadership Study and Development (CILSD) is designed to provide students in the Corps of Cadets from all degree programs with a more complete knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals and practices of leadership in a complex society. The CILSD is also available to students in other programs provided that all prerequisites are met.

The program requires a minimum of 12 credit hours in designated courses. Two hours in SOMS 380 and two hours in SOMS 481 are required for the certificate. The remaining 8 hours must be taken from any combination of the courses listed below.

In addition to the coursework, leadership practice and application are required. Verified experience in the Corps of Cadets, university organizations, internships, or study abroad is acceptable and may count toward the certificate requirement.
